HABITAT FOR HUMANITY GETS HELP FROM LOCAL DEVELOPER

Charles Town, WV: Habitat for Humanity of the Eastern Panhandle, located in Martinsburg, recently received a windfall of supplies from Greenvest at Huntfield. “Greenvest builds quality communities where families can put down roots and grow and thrive”, said Travis Witmer, Project Manager for Greenvest at Huntfield. “Donating these materials to Habitat for Humanity just seemed like the right thing to do.”

“We are very grateful when partnerships such as this come our way”, said Dudley Weber, General Motors Volunteer for Habitat for Humanity of the Eastern Panhandle. “It is exactly this type of partnership that allows us to continue the work begun by Linda and Millard Fuller in Georgia 30 years ago.” “Our motto of ‘Building houses, Building lives’ is made easier with donations from companies like Greenvest”, said Mr. Weber.

Among the items donated were various sizes of windows and interior and exterior doors, locksets, plywood, and wood trim in a variety of lengths. The building materials donated by Greenvest will be used to replenish Habitat for Humanity’s Restore and also utilized to continue the work on several houses in the Eastern Panhandle of West Virginia. “We are happy to support Habitat for Humanity in their efforts to improve the quality of life of the citizens of Jefferson County and the surrounding area”, said Marisa Goff, Director of Communications, Greenvest LC.
